YUE SHI PH.D.

I am a highly accomplished bioinformatician with extensive academic experience in developing and executing complex DNA/RNA research projects. My expertise in bioinformatics and data science is showcased through a strong publication record in genomics with lead authorship, presentations at esteemed conferences, and my role as a peer reviewer for several respected academic journals. As a scientist, I am interested in all aspects of genomics and bioinformatics, with a paricular focus on evolution, liquid biopsies, interpretable machine learning, and the development of automated, reproducible workflows.

EDUCATION

2019 — Ph.D., Biology
University of Washington — Seattle, WA

2013 — M.S., Ecology
Oean University of China — Qingdao, China

2010 — B.S., Biological Sciences
Ocean University of China — Qingdao, China

RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

Current | 2022 — Scientist I
Department of Human Oncology, University of Wisconsin - Madison — Remote

- Optimized a pan-cancer targeted DNA sequencing panel.
- Developed bioinformatics pipelines to call somatic variants and copy number alterations using circulating cell-free DNA.
- Characterized the features of tumor-derived fragments in cell-free DNA.
- Integrated publicly available cancer genomics datasets to identify novel targets for the development of cancer treatments.
- Conducted survival analyses and estimated circulating tumor DNA fractions for clinical trials.
- Mentored MD/PhD students on data science projects.

2022 | 2020 — Postdoctoral Fellow
College of Fisheries and Ocean Sciences, University of Alaska Fairbanks — Remote

- Developed a bioinformatics pipeline to detect structural variants.
- Conducted genome scan analyses within a comparative genomics framework.
- Developed SNP panels to improve the resolution of population structure for fisheries management.
- Developed a bioinformatics pipeline to estimate the number of contributing individuals in DNA mixture samples.

2020 | 2019

Postdoctoral Research Scientist

College of Natural Resources, University of Wisconsin - Stevens Point

Remote

- Conducted reduced-representation sequencing library preparation for approximately 2,900 samples.
- Developed normalization protocols using the OT-2 liquid handling robot.
- Trained master's students in DNA metabarcoding bioinformatics pipelines.

2019 | 2012

Graduate Research Assistant

Department of Biology, University of Washington

Seattle, WA

- Enhanced the laboratory's high-throughput sequencing capacity by establishing experimental design guidelines, optimizing library preparation protocols, managing reference databases, and setting up bioinformatics pipelines for amplicon sequencing data.

2017 | 2013

Project Consultant

BIOFAB, University of Washington

Seattle, WA

- Conducted presentations to promote BIOFAB's automated workflows and attract new clients.
- Designed and oversaw molecular cloning projects for clients.
- Gathered feedback from clients and collaborated with team members to incorporate new features into the Aquarium software.
